

A black and white cow is shown in a metal restraint, possibly a milking machine. The cow's head is visible on the right, looking towards the camera. The restraint consists of metal bars and a blue coiled hose. The background is dark and indistinct.

got misery?

CAUGHT ON CAMERA:

The industry won't show you the truth. We will.

What We Found Behind Dairy's Closed Doors

A Mercy For Animals investigator went undercover at a New York dairy farm. What was uncovered is devastating: newborn calves taken from their mothers, violent abuse, and suffering treated as routine.

Calves Ripped Away at Birth

Just moments after birth, mother cows had their calves torn away—in some cases with placentas still hanging from the mothers' bodies.

Violent Handling and No Veterinary Care

Cows were kicked and beaten with poles and had their tails twisted to force them to move. Many suffered from painful infections and open wounds.

TAKE ACTION FOR MOTHER COWS:

gotmisery.com